New Hard-Boiled Detective Series Mixes Bones, Murder & History!

Paleontologist turned private investigator Harry Przewalski excavates the dirty underbelly of people's lives, unearthing sexual betrayals, treachery, fraud and murder buried beneath the science of petrified shards, skin and bones. Ultimately, he must face a brutal killing in his own past, when he fled to a desert war and came back with a gun and a license to detect.

In his second case, Death Spoke, Przewalski investigates the murder of a university dean, a renowned archaeologist and expert on prehistoric cave paintings. The dean's lover has been charged with her murder, implicated by semen, hair and fingerprints. Police think the case is closed. His lawyer thinks he's guilty.

Hired to find the killer, Przewalski excavates the deadly archaeological layers of the case, finding lives torn by deceit and vendetta surrounding the most famous cave art in France. The dean was ruthless. Her academic politics and archaeological studies brought deadly enemies. Was the murder a payback for her sexual blackmail? Was the art in one of the most famous caves forged to attract tourists? Who really painted the luminous bison, deer, mammoths, and horses on the cave walls? And why? Were they hunters? Or shamans? Or artistic outcasts driven by their precocious talent and psychological isolation. Przewalski discovers a deadly diabolical plot hatched in a buried past in the deepest recesses of the caves.

Death Spoke is the sequel to the first novel in the Harry Przewalski series, The Bone Field, which will be published by Anamcara Press on June 20, 2019. The third novel in the series, The Camel Driver, is forthcoming.
