MURDER AT THE GALVEZ
8/21/2021

Eighteen years after discovering the murdered body of her grandfather in the foyer of the historic Galvez Hotel, reporter Sydney Lockhart returns to Galveston, Texas to cover a story. Instead, she finds herself embroiled in a murder mystery.

Something fishy is going on in Galveston, Texas, and Sydney is smack dab in the middle of it when she checks into the historic Galvez Hotel, a place that stirs her most uncomfortable memories. She's there cover the controversial Pelican Island Development Project conference, but soon after her arrival, the conference is canceled, the keynote speaker is missing, and a body turns up in the trunk of Sydney's car. Next, Sydney's hauled to the police station for questioning.

As if this wasn't bad enough, just a few blocks from the hotel at her parents' home, people are gathering, sparks are flying, another controversial event is in the planning, one that just might rival the Great Storm of 1900.

Sydney is helped and obstructed by her cousins, Ruth and Marcela, and Dixon, her beloved partner-in-solving-crime. But ultimately it's Sydney, armed with wit and bravado (and Dixon's 45) who must discover who killed the man in the trunk and why her father's new friend is floating face-down in a fish tank with a bullet in his head. Her father's odd behavior and the anonymous threatening notes delivered to her hotel room lead Sydney to suspect that her grandfather's unsolved murder and the present murders might be connected.

A sassy Who-Don't-It with an enthralling cast of characters.

THE BODY ON THE BED

“A THRILLING TALE OF MURDER AND BETRAYAL ... A LURID

9/26/2021

WEB OF DECEIT ... IMPECCABLY RESEARCHED. —KIRKUS REVIEWS

Mary Fanning finds the body on the bed in the house next door, poisoned. Smart, tough and inquisitive, she covers the murder trial as the first woman reporter for the Kansas Daily Tribune. Amid the upheaval of post-Civil War Lawrence, she unravels the diabolical plots and desperate lives that led to three dead bodies and a shocking last act.

Did a doctor's brazen affair with his patient's wife incite him to murder? On the morning of April 28, 1871, the body of Isaac Miles Ruthman is found poisoned in his bed in Lawrence, Kansas. His doctor, John J. Medicott, a fervent churchgoer, is arrested and charged with first degree murder. He's carrying a picture of Ruthman's wife, Anne Catherine, and two of her love poems in his wallet. He'd visited Ruthman the previous evening to give him a medicinal powder—a poison cocktail of deadly nightshade and morphine, according to the autopsy.

Is it a coincidence that the doctor's wife, Sarah, died suddenly and mysteriously just four months earlier? Did Medicott first kill her, then Ruthman? Or did Ruthman commit suicide?

Mary Fanning, sharp, strong-willed, and the first woman correspondent for the Kansas Daily Tribune, is assigned to report on the trial and investigate Ruthman's poisoning. Her independence leads her to fight for suffrage for women and Blacks in post-Civil War Kansas. Her ardor leads her into an illicit love affair with a woman. Her incisive mind leads her to uncover lives torn by lust, obsession, and deceit, a trail of dead victims, and the fiendish scheme behind the body on the bed.

POSTS OF A MID-CENTURY KID

Anderson takes us on a journey to 1950s and 60s Kansas and treats the reader to hometown cooking in her tasty memoir Posts of a Mid-Century Kid. With humor and richly crafted details, she chronicles her mid-century childhood, offering a sampling of another era. This delightful and mischievous memoir advocates coloring vividly outside of the lines!

A fun exploration of vintage toys, traditional festivities and personal growth into adulthood when life was “easy.” Ann vividly describes the beauty of the prairie state and the restorative impact of nature in her life. Summers spent at her grandparents’ farm, growing up with cousins, and family reunions offer a connection to the halcyon days of the mid-century.

Posts of a Mid-Century Kid takes the reader on a comforting journey to the farm pond with a cane pole and a can of worms, summer vacations in Colorado, waiting for the seed catalogue with grandmother, and the joy of eating ‘rainy day’ popcorn balls with mom during a Kansas thunderstorm.

Ann offers generous helpings of comfort-food-reading as she shares family stories and recipes of prize desserts prepared for generations, and gives second servings of hope and strength in the form of experiences shared, and the memories she stirs into her words.

“Posts of a Mid-Century Kid by Ann Vigola Anderson gives the reader ample evidence of how interesting an ordinary life can be, of how observations as one simply goes along in life can provide universal insights. Anderson’s prose is clear and engaging, and the book’s subtitle sums up the author’s efforts and this reader’s reaction nicely: “Doing my best. Having fun.”

THE BUG DIARY
10/24/2021

The Bug Diary takes the reader on a wild review of history and bugs, and a laugh-out-loud exploration of campus life in this New Adult & College Fantasy.

When Freshman Kymer Charvat indulges in recreational drugs with her new friends, an on-campus ghost hands her a mystery to solve.

Kymer is confronted by a ghost from KU's past: Carrie Watson, the librarian who is the library's namesake. Carrie gives Kymer the insect field journal of Flora Ellen Richardson, the first woman to graduate from KU. When Kymer reviews the bug diary, she realizes there's a bee in Flora's journal that's never before been identified by science. A wild ride ensues changing the world of entomology, and her personal world, forever.

“Amber Fraley’s The Bug Diary is a loving and authentic tribute to undergraduate life, to the risks, vulnerabilities—and ultimately profound misunderstandings and awareness—that can arise when young people expose themselves to personal transformation.”

—Nathan Pettengill, editor, Sunflower Publishing

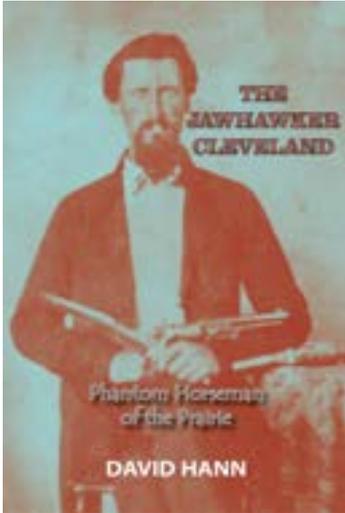

I haven't seen many books in any genre which feature a character who loves bugs and isn't portrayed as a weirdo for it, and it's refreshing how her genuine fascination with entomology shines through the book's other details and events.

THE JAYHAWKER CLEVELAND 11/3/2021

In an era of historical reckoning, David Hann excavates a hero from the Kansas-Missouri border wars, the Free-State guerrilla fighter Marshall Cleveland. Hann, a writer, poet, Kansan and Marine, writes in lean, powerful prose, bringing that fraught time to life. He hews close to the historical record, and his meticulous research takes us from the forgotten New York cholera epidemics to the fields on Bleeding Kansas. ... The reader will never look at the Kansas Jayhawks the same way.
—Ron Kuby, Lawrence, Kansas

A legend in his own time, Cleveland rode into Leavenworth alone in June, 1861 to view his own “Wanted Dead or Alive” poster. No one in that town of 12,000 inhabitants, nor any soldiers from Fort Leavenworth, attempted to collect the reward, and Cleveland rode slowly out of town, tipping his hat.

The Free State of Kansas and the slave state of Missouri are the backdrop of this tale of heroic deeds and fatal mistakes. David Hann takes the reader on a trail ride through a gritty time in the American West when people were pitted against each other and some had to choose sides in a life-and-death battle of ideas.

Not all of the settlers in Kansas and Missouri had an opinion on the slavery question, but having no opinion was not an option. Residents were caught in the middle of two conflicting ideas, and a wrong answer given to strangers could result in loss of property and sometimes loss of life.

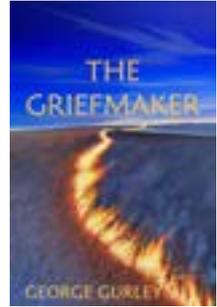

The Jayhawker Cleveland is a story of a man and his times. Culled from 1860s newspaper articles and published reports of a tumultuous and violent era in American history, Hann describes how this liberator of slaves and horses found brief but deadly fame during the Kansas Missouri Border War.

WRONG MAN DOWN A MILLY HENSHAW CRIME NOVEL

“A FUN CRIME TALE WITH AN INTRIGUING PROTAGONIST . . . A TALENTED HIT WOMAN.” —KIRKUS REVIEWS

Millie Henshawe—intrepid, smart-talking, gay ex-GI—is the field agent (hired gun) for Continental Removals, LLC, in Boston, a niche firm catering to very special clients. Millie’s well-honed skills are tested when the unexpected happens and the hired gun becomes the target!

This fun, off-beat, murder mystery introduces wacky, unconventional characters. Millie’s boss Ralph Klammer and his partner Mary Michael Mulloy, who founded Continental Removals around the time of the Vietnam war with Ralph’s mother, Sheila. Their assassin out-fitter and clean-up guy, Mr. Moustakas, Jauncy Chambers, the off-kilter driver for Millie’s first hit who thinks the whole set-up is just like the movies. And then there’s Ray Roth, a sad-sack gambler who leads Millie to an unlikely story and the unsettling truth about the business.

“It’s been a long time since I’ve felt the need to carry a book around with me just so I could read it every chance I got. Rarely seen nowadays, the book was actually written in good English and there were no plot holes. It wasn’t until I reached the blurb at the end that I discovered that the author is an emeritus Professor of English, which I guess explains the quality of the writing. The story twists are reasoned and explained in a depth that wouldn’t be out of place in a Jack Reacher novel.” —Paul Lautman, NetGalley Reviewer

THE HERO VERSUS ME & MONKEY JO A NOVEL ABOUT VIETNAM SET IN 1968

A GOOD REDEMPTION STORY, THE CHARACTERS WERE BELIEVABLE AND FELT LIKE REAL PEOPLE. I REALLY ENJOYED READING THIS BOOK. —KAY McLEER, NETGALLEY REVIEWER

1968. Henry's just turned 18 and his birthday present is a 2nd class ticket to the Vietnam war. The Vietnam war you've never heard about.

THE HERO Versus Me & Monkey Jo chronicles the adventures of Henry Neis who arrives in Vietnam an innocent youth from Kansas, and quickly falls in with addicts and lost souls. Perry Shepard's prose pulls the reader into the "scene" immediately, and propels us on a journey that is at times exhilarating, shocking, and moving. A rollicking read and an eye-opening look at the experience of soldiers in Vietnam.

Quick-witted, fast-learning Henry and his attention-loving orphan monkey play the lead roles in this wartime comedy/action/drama. Everywhere they go they make new friends and new enemies. But an entity that is neither human nor animal soon vies for center stage. It's a chemical compound called heroin. It weaves through the narrative of Henry's year-long deployment, alternately playing angel and demon. It saves Henry's life but kills his friend. It gives Henry fortitude to face relentless danger and unspeakable carnage; it wins him friends and buys him influence. But then it reveals its dark side, leaving Henry to wonder whether he can break free from its addictive grip. Both Henry and the characters that surround him are complex and intriguing; none more so than the would-be hero/villain: heroin. By the time Henry boards the plane back to the States, he has experienced the absurdities of military life, the atrocities of war, unexpected friendships, unrequited love, betrayal, and loyalty. He may seem none the worse for wear, but he will never be the same. —L,A, Harder

A MEMOIR

“Posts of a Mid-Century Kid by Ann Vigola Anderson gives the reader ample evidence of how interesting an ordinary life can be, of how observations as one simply goes along in life can provide universal insights. Anderson’s prose is clear and engaging, and the book’s subtitle sums up the author’s efforts and this reader’s reaction nicely: “Doing my best. Having fun.”

“A ‘lost’ canister of photographs not developed until 2006... a POW... and a fascinating family history. This is a pretty incredible collection of stories, letters and photographs, woven together by M. Carroll. From Wyoming to Germany and back. Three brothers go to war, only two return. What a journey!” —Jeff Linamen, NetGalley Reviewer

“Amazing. Truly a case of a picture telling a thousand words. Through these images, I felt a real sense for what life must have been like. I hope books like this will keep a dark period in our history alive so we will not see it repeated.” —Louise Gray, NetGalley Reviewer

THE BLUE DOG
Book #2

“If Enid Blyton books were your favourite and you’re looking for something similar for your child, this is a good choice. Suitable for children aged 7 and above, fast-paced mystery story and a very fun heroine! I like that it’s relatable to kids, with mentions of the internet and Tiktok and so on, but the kids aren’t obsessed with their phones, and on the contrary, spend their time outdoors!”

A TREE IDENTIFICATION PICTURE BOOK

FLIP BOOK, A TWO-WAY
TALE; WITH TWO BOOKS
IN ONE, TWO FRONT
COVERS AND NO END!

This lavishly illustrated children's picture book helps children, and adults, identify different species of trees.

The Tree Who Walked Through Time is a story of an old Cottonwood tree who takes a stroll down memory lane, exploring the different trees that grow around him. The Cottonwood, named Prairie Prince, has a conversation with a boy who has fallen asleep under his branches.

This is a flip book, a two-way tale; there are two books in one, with two front covers and no end! Flip the book over to read The Boy Whose Branches Reached the Stars, the story of a boy named Peter who longs to be tall like a tree. He explores the forest, imagining different trees he might like to be, and finally meets Prairie Prince.

FRACTALS
Fractal Images
AN ART BOOK

A BOOK FOR ART
LOVERS, DESIGNERS,
AND ART-LOVING TECHIES EVERYWHERE

What is a fractal? A fractal is essentially a never-ending, repeating pattern. Fractals reflect the art of chaos, as seen in crystal growth and galaxy formation. Fractal geometry can reflect and illuminate structures and patterns found in nature—from mountains, coastlines, and hurricanes to movements of the stock market over time.

Fractals can be seen to represent a metaphor for our chaotic times, perhaps, as we attempt to understand the processes and structures which are manifest in the chaos and ineffable beauty of our ever-changing and dynamic natural world.

In Fractals: Fractal Art, the art of chaos is brilliantly represented by Jack Cleveland's artistic sensibility and his mastery of math and computer science. Colorful swirls of recurring patterns descend smaller and smaller into imagined infinity, pleasing to the eye.

Fractal images are not made by the computer—they are not “computer-generated”—but rather are generated using computer graphics to create new and compelling works of art to represent dynamic phenomena not fully captured by classical mathematics.
